Right down the middle of Broadway, cutting a gash of excitement in the middle of the Tenderson, streaked a syoung foreigner to-day, winnoring the air with a pair of very large, very wildly waving hands and screaming in broken English and unbroken German at the top of his voice.

With a flying squadron of men and boys trailing him, he ran to the police exation on West Thirtieth street, where he opened the door and fell on the floor in front of the desk screamin and additional to the present of the total of his voice.

With a flying squadron of men and boys trailing him, he ran to the police exation on West Thirtieth street, where he opened the door and fell on the floor in front of the desk scream in a dead faint. When he came to and swam out of the water which the profigul reserves had poured over him, he told a story that led to a raid on a pool and billiard room.

He was Louis Blendler, lately landed from Zurich by way of Union Hill, N. J. He is verdant as the ciclwest of his native Alps-tall, slender, reffeced and curry-heired. He talks Manhattanese with an accent that would make Joe Weber want to crawl into a pronouncing glossary and hide.
